

The Wind and the Sun

---

Once, there was a king who possessed the power to turn anything he touched into gold.

Initially delighted, he soon realized the consequences of his gift.

---

When he hugged his daughter, she turned into a golden statue.

The king realized that his greed for gold had cost him his loved ones.

Distraught, he pleaded for the gift to be taken away, learning the importance of love and human connection.

The moral of the story: Material wealth cannot replace the value of relationships and love.

via www.devisephotos.com