

The Wind and the Sun

The Wind and the Sun engaged in a contest to see who was stronger.

They spotted a traveler wearing a coat and decided to make him remove it.

The Wind blew with all its might, but the traveler held his coat tighter.

The Sun beamed warm rays, and the traveler willingly took off his coat.

The moral of the story: Kindness and gentleness can achieve what force and aggression cannot.

via www.devisephotos.com